

Right:
A telescope with an aperture-reduction mask and a special filter which reflects away most of the light may be used for the safe observation of the sun.

Far right:
A proper projection box is the simplest and safest method of observing the sun telescopically.

Below:
A white light whole-disc photograph of the Sun, showing a great amount of detail.

